The point-in-time board: every published causal-discovery method is batch, and nobody has measured what that costs